Housing Authority donation

Housing Authority donation includes earliest photos of Stanley Holmes Village

One of the newest collections to the Atlantic City Free Public Library's Alfred M. Heston Room comes courtesy of the Atlantic City Housing Authority (ACHA).

The ACHA donated to the library a collection of materials that documents its programs, specifically its earliest developments: Stanley Holmes Village, Jonathan Pitney Village and Buzby Village.

The collection's photographs, construction records and some publications were found by ACHA when Pitney Village was demolished.

"These important historical paper documents were deteriorating and we wanted them to be preserved in the public domain," said Pamela T. James, ACHA Executive Director.

There are approximately 300 photographs, which date back to the 1930s, and they are largely representative of Stanley Holmes Village, including images of its construction, groundbreaking and cornerstone laying ceremonies, and images of Stanley

Holmes' first tenants moving into their new homes.

James said some of the noteworthy pieces are "before and after photos of Atlantic City" that show "the early landscape of the city" and a 1941 booklet

"Atlantic City and Public Housing," which "clearly outlines the history of the creation of public housing in Atlantic City."

These records join the collection of 1930s ACHA scrapbooks, which the ACHA previously donated. More information about this collection can be found at www.acfpl.org under 'Atlantic City—archival collections.'

This collection can be viewed during Heston research hours: Wednesdays from 2-4:30 p.m., Thursday from 9:30 a.m.-12 p.m. and 2-4:30 p.m. Appointments can be made to view the collections at other times by calling (609) 345-2269, ext. 3062.

Did You Know?

The library offers an e-resource for ESL learners that's available 24/7

The Atlantic City Free Public Library is proud to introduce its newest premium e-resource, the English Language Learner (ELL) Reference Center.

The resource is available at the library, but those who have an Atlantic City Library card can access this great resource from any computer with an Internet connection 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

The ELL Reference Center is designed especially for English as a Second Language learners young and old. It contains information on life skills and citizenship, and it includes research articles on different topics for students. There are more than 1,000 main articles that a person can read or listen to using ELL's unique speech component, which reads the article in an American or English accent! And ... readers can read this information in their own language because ELL features 30 different languages.

The articles in the ELL Reference Center start with an abstract, which is a summary of the article. The abstract tells the most important parts of the article in two or three sentences. And, they all have at least one least one picture or photograph. Other abstracts include drawings, diagrams or maps. The pictures can help the reader understand the ideas in the article. Sometimes it's easier to understand an idea if the person can see it instead of just reading about it.

Please ask any of the reference librarians about this new resource. Stop by the Main Library Reference Desk, call 345-2269 or e-mail reflib@acfpl.org for more information. Also, the library offers Personal Librarian Service (PLS) appointments to those who want one-on-one assistance.
